

MORE CONNECTIVITY

MORE TOURISM

MORE FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT (FDI)

As an island nation competing in a globalised marketplace, our connectivity with the rest of the world is critical to Ireland's economic wellbeing.

Dublin Airport, working with airline customers, has a direct role in the growth of tourism and FDI into Ireland.

Dublin Airport facilitates Ireland having one of the highest levels of GDP adjusted connectivity of any European country, 40% higher than the UK for example.

We are proud to be the home base for two major carriers, Ryanair and Aer Lingus, and we serve over 40 other scheduled airlines.

MORE JOBS

Dublin Airport is one of the most important sources of job creation in the State.

The immediate vicinity of Dublin Airport has one of the highest employment densities in the country, with 19,200 people directly employed at the airport alone.

When we take into account the 98,100 additional direct and indirect jobs generated by activities at Dublin Airport, the total employment figure comes to 117,300.

MORE GDP

The activities of Dublin Airport play a major part in the overall performance of the Irish economy.

In 2016 it contributed €8.3 billion to Ireland's GDP. This represents an impressive 3.1% of total GDP, significantly higher than the contribution of many entire sectors of Irish industry.

MORE DESTINATIONS

Dublin Airport has seen tremendous growth due to an increase in both destination choice and the frequency of flights from existing and new airlines.

This means that there are now over 180 destinations to choose from across four continents, with more than 200,000 non-stop scheduled flights in operation per year, and over 2,200 departing flights per week during the busy summer season.

MORE VISITORS

There were over 10 million visitors to the island of Ireland in 2016. Almost 70% of these (7 million visitors) entered and left through Dublin Airport, equating to 14 million passenger journeys (arriving and departing). These visitors come from across the globe and travel throughout the country. Dublin Airport accounts for 80% of all visitors to Dublin, 20% to Northern Ireland and 40% to other regions.

Everybody in Ireland knows where Dublin Airport is. But not everybody appreciates just how much it does for our economy, our employment levels, and our ability to travel to and trade with the rest of the world.

From tourism to foreign direct investment, every day new careers, new business opportunities and new connections are launched from Ireland's primary international transport hub.

MORE SOON

We've got even bigger plans for the future. We're currently developing our new 3,110 metre North Runway which will enable airlines to expand existing services, add new routes and grow connections to Ireland's global markets in Asia, Africa and the Americas. This project will support tens of thousands of new jobs, enhance connectivity and increase customer choice and value.

We've also commenced work on Dublin Airport Central, a major new development that will create over 40,000 square metres of office accommodation and a new landscaped public space connected to Terminal 2.

Up to 4,000 employees will be located at Dublin Airport Central upon completion of this first phase alone.
