2.9 Pollution Control - Glycol Recovery

De-icing operations are typically performed during the Winter period at Dublin airport and involves the use of Glycol-based chemicals. These liquids may pollute local watercourses, reducing the oxygen demand levels in the water. daa employ numerous measures to address this risk, such as glycol recovery vehicles to remove neat chemical from stands, and a pollution control system to intercept contaminated surface water runoff before it enters surface waters.

The charge for glycol recovery is at a cost per litre used rate. The price accounts for costs associated with collection and offsite disposal of recovered neat aircraft de-icing chemicals, and for costs incurred in the collection and discharge of surface water contaminated with de-icer chemicals to sewer.

This charge has been introduced in line with Dublin Airport’s commitment and strategy to meet environmental compliance obligations, in becoming a leader in sustainable airport operations.

All airlines and ground handlers responsible for carrying out aircraft anti/deicing must email winterops@daa.ie with glycol usage records on a weekly basis. Failure to supply this data will result in daa issuing charges based on estimates and/or historical glycol data.

Service	Charge €	Description
Glycol Recovery	0.661	Cost per litre including Sewer discharge, collection and associated costs

 Kilfrost DF Plus (Type I) has a COD level of 1.39 kg O₂/kg fluid, compared to Kilfrost ABC-S Plus (Type IV) which has a COD level of 0.69 kg O₂/kg fluid; therefore, use of Kilfrost ABC-S Plus (Type IV) will result in a lower charge.*
